Mrs. McLendon was followed by Dr. Delah, who, after describing in an interesting manner, the methods employed by the national organization in securing the liquor traffic, spoke of the proposed bringing of the 1914 convention to Atlanta, as follows:

"Largest Gathering of Women." "It is a matter of getting a sufficient first subscribed by the business and professional women of the city of Atlanta to insure proper accommodations and entertainment for the delegates. The national Women's Christian Temperance union convention of the last three years more than 1,000 delegates, representing every state in the union, have been present, and I see no reason why the convention should not have as large, if not larger, attendance if held in this city."

It would be well to get things started at once, and send a large delegation to the next national convention, which will be held in New York City, during the month of November. It is the duty of every woman to support the cause of the temperance cause, and it is the duty of every woman to support the cause of the temperance cause.

Prestige and Advertising Values

ADVERTISING has developed so rapidly along the various courses of least resistance that fallacy after fallacy have had their vogue. Millions have been wasted in the discovery of their error. The most flagrant abuses, contradictory to good business principles and commercial ethics, have crept in and seemed to thrive.

But crooked advertising methods have about hanged themselves. Wildcat methods and questionable business devices based upon advertising, are curling up and disappearing before a national sentiment for honesty and conservatism. Advertising is very rapidly systematizing itself. Sound business principles are coming into their own. The advertising adventurer is finding no more easy harvests. The public is not gullible today. Studious analysis and the finest sort of conservatism in the expenditure of advertising appropriations are taking the place of reckless speculation. Advertising is very much nearer being a true business science than ever before.

ONE of the phases of this reaction is the increasing aversion of advertisers to buying space merely on circulation statements. A few years ago, "How much circulation has your publication?" was invariably the first, and frequently the only, question a publisher was asked to answer. In order to answer it effectively and truthfully, as nearly all of them desired to do, he directed the entire energy of his operating organization to producing circulation figures, regardless of cost and of profit to himself or the advertiser. He was driven to that extreme by the advertiser.

In recent years the most skillful advertisers; those with the largest annual appropriations; those whose business success is the most contingent upon their advertising program, are discounting mere circulation figures. They are systematically gathering information from which to answer for themselves such questions as these:

What is the character of the publication?

What is its age?

What kind of people are its subscribers?

Over what area does its circulation range?

How does it secure and hold its subscribers?

Is its appeal to its constituency such as to elicit their confidence in its news and editorial opinions?

What proportion of the people it reaches are both by location of residence and station in life reasonably possible purchasers?

Is its management such as to give complete credence to its circulation representations?

Advertisers desiring to reach only certain classes are demanding even more special information, for the purpose of determining what mediums will give them the most responsive circulation, in relation to their particular advertising.

At the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, in Baltimore last May, there was a veritable outcry from national advertisers generally against unnatural increases in newspaper circulations, bringing with them inevitably increased rates. They demanded solidification; intensification of circulations within natural bounds; the minimization of waste; and the employment of only those methods of expanding circulation as will produce permanent readers among responsible classes.

THERE are, broadly speaking, among the whites, no classes of people in Atlanta and Georgia in relation to newspaper circulation. In such cities as New York, Chicago and Boston, there are distinct classes, each sufficient to maintain newspapers of class appeal. For example, The New York Evening Post and The Boston Transcript, both excellent and prosperous papers, are read almost exclusively by wealthy and cultured people.

Here in Georgia everybody is pretty much alike. There is not much difference between any of us in dress, food, habits and sentiments. There is only a small proportion of very poor people and almost as small a percentage of people who are wealthy.

In evidence of this there are about 2,500 men in Atlanta who are members of one or more of the three leading social clubs. The majority of men in Atlanta of considerable means or income are members of one or more of these clubs. The entire population which they represent, on a basis of five to each family, is but 12,500, or 7 per cent of the entire population. If a newspaper reached every one of their homes it would have but 2,500 class circulation in Atlanta.

There are no stores in Atlanta catering to the wealthy classes exclusively. Fifth Avenue in New York is lined with them for miles. There are not enough wealthy people in the city to provide a profitable patronage to many stores carrying only expensive merchandise. Ninety per cent of the stock of Atlanta stores is sold to all classes. Most stores carry some lines of goods that only the wealthy can afford, and some lines that only the poor will accept. Broadly speaking, however, stores are not stocked for the classes, but for the masses, because the masses make up the great "90 per cent."

The same thing is true of newspaper circulation. Any newspaper of circulation running into the thousands must reach about the same general average of people as any other paper in the same field.

Consequently 1,000 actual circulation, the kind that is delivered in the homes, of one newspaper in Atlanta and Georgia among white people is, on that basis alone, worth about as much for advertising purposes as an equal quantity of any other newspaper.

THERE is, however, a distinction that relates to quality rather than to quantity, which is responsible for a very great difference in circulation value in relation to advertising results.

It has been demonstrated repeatedly, by exhaustive tests, that all other things being approximately equal, the longer a publication has had the same list of subscribers and the better its standing with them the higher is its productiveness as a medium for legitimate lines of advertising.

This element is commonly referred to as PRESTIGE.

It is accounted for on two grounds. The longer a newspaper goes into a home the more it becomes a part of the family life. The reading of it regularly becomes a fixed habit. It is read thoroughly day by day. The more thoroughly a paper is read, for any cause, the more is the advertising read.

Instinctively people who read advertising, and nearly all of them do, unless it is obviously not entitled to it, give it the same general credence they do the news or editorial pages upon which it appears. If a reader has confidence in the dependability of his newspaper, intuitively he transfers that confidence to its advertising columns. The association of ideas is inevitable.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION was established forty-five years ago. It has always been the same general type of a newspaper it is today—conservative, clean, able, enterprising and progressive. Its circulation has had a gradual growth from a few thousand to approximately 50,000.

The average period of 1,000 subscriptions taken at random in Atlanta recently in a test upon another matter, was found to be ten years. Probably half of its present subscribers have taken the paper many years, some for twenty-five years and more for ten years or more.

A considerable part of The Constitution's constant increase in circulation comes through sons and daughters of old subscribers entering new homes of their own, with the paper as one of the first family investments.

The Constitution is referred to as "The Georgia Bible." It is a great Southern Institution. It stands for all that is best in southern life, both traditionally and currently. It has that prestige which goes with reliability.

It is those two factors, in relation to advertising values, more than any distinctions in the classes of people it reaches, which gives it a very high value as an advertising medium, and which more than offset mere quantities of papers distributed as the basis for circulation figures.

COTTON FELL OFF SLIGHTLY ON DAY

Market Broke Sharply When Condition Figures Were Read, But Prices Rallied in Late Trading.

New York, October 2.—The government cotton crop report was the last official condition of the season and placed the crop outlook at 64.1 per cent comparing with 65.8 last year, 71.1 in 1911 and 64.6 the year-average. Local statisticians pointed out that the condition was the lowest for the last year, but the expectation considered it pointed to a crop of 64.1 per cent, but the figures proved a little under the expectations of recent months and proved the signal for heavy general selling of cotton. The market fell off sharply on a reaction of some 25 to 30 points from the previous day's close.
